

NO LITTER DAY –WORLD WIDE 16 MAY 2018

A MILLION CHILDREN JOIN LITTER CAMPAIGN

Children around the world have been learning about littering as part of the No Litter Generation initiative. 16 May is ‘No Litter Day’, when children will come together for community litter picking.

“We’re bringing together a million children around the world to teach people about the consequences of littering and how we can all help look after our resources. On No Litter Day, children will stand together for a cleaner world,” says Magnus Bergmar, CEO of the World’s Children’s Prize.

The first No Litter Day will be celebrated on 16 May, 2018. The day is the climax of the No Litter Generation initiative, a project that has involved millions of children and young people all over the world learning about the causes and consequences of littering, as well as solutions to the problem. The children then share their knowledge with their families and become changemakers for a cleaner, safer society, both locally and globally.

The children demonstrate that they are part of the No Litter Generation by reporting how many kilos of litter they have collected. At the beginning of June, we will know how many tonnes the world’s children have collectively picked.

“On No Litter Day, children and young people learn about the environmental impact of litter and how to manage our resources sustainably. The children pick litter together while at the same time encouraging the adult world to do more to achieve the vision of a society in which nobody drops litter,” explains Johanna Ragnartz, CEO of Keep Sweden Tidy.

The initiative is the idea of the World’s Children’s Prize and Keep Sweden Tidy. The No Litter Generation initiative is part of the World’s Children’s Prize program, which since 2000 has educated and empowered 42 million children around the world to be changemakers who stand up for human fellowship, the equal value of all people, the rights of the child, democracy and sustainable development. Keep Sweden Tidy is a voluntary organisation that works to reduce and prevent littering. They already run Sweden’s biggest litter picking campaign, with almost 800,000 participants every year.

“The collaboration between the World’s Children’s Prize and Keep Sweden Tidy provides a unique opportunity to mobilize millions of children across the globe for a cleaner world. It’s not about cleaning, it’s about learning and sharing knowledge,” says Magnus Bergmar, CEO at the World’s Children’s Prize.

No Litter Day – a community day

Children celebrate No Litter Day together with children in countries affected by poverty and conflict. They include children who have been exploited as soldiers, debt slaves or in the child sex trade. They are not picking litter to tidy up after adults, but rather to teach them. For many of the children, it is the first time they have learned about how littering on land and at sea affects the environment and their own health. Sidra, 12, from Pakistan, is looking forward to the day. “We need to teach people about litter and get them to think about the environment and change their habits. That’s what we’ll do on No Litter Day,” says Sidra to the World’s Children’s Prize.

No Litter Generation

The No Litter Generation initiative is supported by the Swedish Postcode Lottery, as part of their focus on contributing towards the fulfillment of the UN’s Global Goals.

Patrons of the World’s Children’s Prize include Malala Youzafsai, Queen Silvia, the late Nelson Mandela and Sweden’s Prime Minister and Minister for Children.
